The camp at Hartsville was more than a mile from the town, and upon the bank of the Cumberland, on ground which, according to the statement of the Adjutant of the 100th sition for an adequate force, was a mos roops, said to be the best in the Confederate e, consisting in part of two Kentucky inta, who were engaged in the battle of maining 1,000 were guerillas and bushwhackers, who joined his command on the way, and who, after the surrender, dropped out at every cross-read and at almost every house, and re-turned to their peaceful occupations, resolved rens henceforth. In addition to this large force, he brought with him twelve pieces of artiflery to overcome the two six pounders of the Federals. The two fords near Hartsville, ne three quarters of a mile and the other the Federals. The two fords near Hartweitle, one three quarters of a mile and the other three utilies from our camp, were guarded by our men. Consequently, Morgan selected a spot about seven miles distant, where no one ever suspected an army could affect a crossing, on account of the skeepuses of the benks; but by sloping the ground and literally sliding down his horses, which, as they reached the river, were selected and mounted by his men, he accomplished his purpose. Passing up by a by-road, he succeeded in getting inside of our pickets, hearly all of whom he captured. But one discovered the enemy, and capting a contract of the contract of the e Became so hot that an order was at length ven to fall back. Until then not a man the 104th linched. Every officer and man cod up bravely to the work and fought most fectively. is sufficient cleaness of facts given in every case to lead the public mind in the path of truth. I am aware that all men are failble; some of us have feelings brone direction, and some in another; and also that all men are sensitive, possessing in a greater or less degree those finer feeling; that shine forth in manly life and Christian conduct. Here permit me to remark, for the sake of definite history, a feet; there is more than one Col. Moore of the Sith Illinois, Col. A. B. Moore of the History and the sake of the Sith Illinois, Col. A. B. Moore of the History and the sake of the sake At this juncture Col. Moore, perceiving that it was useless to evaitend longer against a force so greatly experior to his own, raised the white flag and surrendered. Capt. Ladington, with his coropany, who had held a position on the opposite side of the camp, continued to fight for some considerable time after the surrender, doing most indulrable excention. "Company A. Such are the main features of the fight, from which if does not appear that owe more were easily supprised, as before a shot was fired they were in line of battle. Perhaps there was not sufficient precartion taken to guard sealing a sample, and perhaps there flight have been a better, disposition of the Federal troops, but there eatily have been better lighting than was stone by the 194th for more than an hour. They contended with the best troops of the Confederate army, and only yielded to overwhelming numbers. The casualties of the regiment, and the heavy leases of the enemy while accessed our own, being not less than 125 killed, are a sufficient proof that if the 194th did not fight long, it fought well, and under the circumstances, was not at all dispraced by the surrender.

I find the different regiments in comfortable winter quarters, having are-places or stoves in all their tents. The most of the regiments draw flour and bake their own light bread by practical bakers. The commissary, except beef, are rather superior in quality, to that issued in Camp Butler. The men are quiet and strictly demestic, apanding a large portion of their spare time in mental and moral invesement. I will give you a little idea of the their taste, and the order in which daily papers are circulated. About 409 copies find a delig circulation at this time—the purchase!

there are over 2,000 contrabands here; they of the optimion that their labor could not be parced. The fortifications are so far completed that our troops feel perfectly safe against a largely superior force. The men have condidence in the cause they are sustaining, in the officers that lead them, and in themselves. Our troops now at Corinth are yet cause. They have a full knowledge of their business, and know how to mind their business. Among the Illinois regiments now here, I have visited the Tth. 12th, 50th, 50d, 57th and the Yates and Birge's sharp-knooters. Miscourl and Ohle have also a fair representation here. There is a strong Union feeling existing in some parts of Tennessee, but in others the mixed. I notherd a personal remark in your isane of the 8th The escape of John M. Wimer from Alton is published. Gen. Stanley's dash into the enemy's lipes along the front to day has resulted most admirably, and Gen. Rosecrans has congratulated the cavalry on their success. The rebel outposts have not only been disturbed but destroyed and broken up. Gen. Stanley attacked in three places, and in every case dispersed the enemy. They made some little relatances and lost a few men, but in all three instances destroyed their camps and fied in confusion. The dash into Franklin was admirably managed. At an early hour yesterday moraling the important rumor was buzzed in the streets that the long expected action at Fredericksburg had at iact commerced, and that we were engaged with the enemy in force.

The following is on epitome of all the initielligence received at the War Department in the shape of official dispatches up to a late hour last night:

The dispatches of Gen. Lee relate that the fight began at Fredericksburg at 5 e'clock in the moraling. At that hour the enemy attempted the passage of the Rappalanance at three different points by means of pontoon bridges. At two points they were repulsed. At the third it is presumed they effected a passage, as the dispatches stated that they had got under cover of their guiss and could not be interrupted in their construction of a bridge. FUETHER PARTICULARS, INCIDENTS, ETC.

It is understood that the point at which the enemy effected a passes of the Rappalannock was at Deep Rm. Boot two miles below Fredericksburg. The Yankees are said to have secured a landing there on a low cape, and our guns went in sposition to aweep their ranks on the Fredericksburg.

The Yankees are said to have cut the line of the camp's pontoon bridges, and pouring in a deadly shower of grape, to have filled the air with the legs, arms and disjointed members of the Yankees. (Bosh)

When the fire was opened on our lines, several hundred women and children were remaining within the limits of Fredericksburg, and their construction is said to have been most pitiful. We have, from different sources, the report that two women were certainly killed by the enemy's fire.

3d. The "double lock stitch," being like the chain or tambour stitch save that two threads are used—one upon the under and one upon the upper side in its making. This requires over six and a half yards of thread to one yard of seam. These all yards of thread to one yard or seam. These re the stitches of the day. Now commencing with Howe's Machine in 1848, ee will proceed to show the Sawing Machines in-cented. All previous to Howe's invention were acrely the gradual approach to a practical Sewing in vessel property, and having engaged in the consting trade, contrary to the statute law of the United States, his vessel and cargo were liable to forfeiture. Another point urged by Mr. Rae was, that the statute required all such vessels to be enrolled and themsed, and it being shown that the cannot how that not compiled with the requirements of the statute in this regard, she was pursuing an Illegal voyage, which subjected her to a penalty, and the violation of the law was a bar to a claim by the libellants for protection under the law. The rights of Mr. Leduce and his partner, Mr. Gibbs, on these several points, were defended by Mr. It. Froudfoot, and the case was taken by the Court under advisement. On Monday last his thonor, Judge Drummond, rendered his decision. He said that interest enough had been shown to have existed in Leduc & Gibbs to entitle them to bring suit, and without entering into the merits of the questions of allenship of Leduc and the non-enrollment of the canal boat, he thought it did not lie in the mouths of the respondents to picad these points as a reason why they should not pay the damages, which by the evidence were fully shown to have arisen from the negligence of those in command of the Blue Wing, and therefore, he should render a decree in tavor of the Hellants. The claims represented amounted to shout $8,00.

CIRCUT COURT—Before Hon. Den. Mandere,—The only business transacted in this Court was the disposal of a motion basing upon some unimportant chancery case. The criminal decket having been exhaulted on Tuesday night, the Court did not take up the civil cail, as the Hopp case, which will be commisched to day, is expected to every the remainder of the term.
